SHANGHAI. April 29-American interests are threatened, due to the defeat of the Reds in the vicinity of REFORESTATION Klukiang where the Reds are looting American and other missions, Chinese residences and stores. Chiang Kai-shek is swiftly pushing the Reds toward Kiukiang, precipitating a crisis and involving wholesale looting and menacing the British concession, where the remnants of the foreign population are concentrated.

Meanwhile, the Fengtienites are crossing the Han River toward Peianfu, threatening Wuhan, following the surrender of two brigades of Chin Yunao's soldiers, after a brief clash esulting in the Fengtienites captur-ng Yenchen and Luho stations. It is believed that Chiang Kai-shek and Chang Tso-lin are negotiating a compromise. Meanwhile both are racing toward Wuhan, determined to nate the Reds.

Mississippi River is proposed as a first step toward permanent control of flood conditions. Recognizing that the outgrowth of the present emergency will be a searching investigation of means to prevent similar occurrences in the future, officials and private individuals acquainted with The Chungking Consul, Walter Adams, has arrived here, after seal-ing the consulate. He left Chung-king April 4. Interviewed, he stated that the Upper Yangtze was seeth-ing with unrest, but that the Lower Yangtze was quieter, despite the numerous Nationalist attacks against British and American warships. Mr. Adams is sailing for the United

The plaintiffs in the case were George W. Willett and Edmund H. Sears. The defendants were Robert F. Herrick, F. S. Moseley & Co., Kidder, Peabody & Co., and Individual members of these firms.

Competent legal opinion is to the effect that the State Supreme Court's denial of plaintiffs' petition for a rehearing of the Willett-Sears suit brings this celebrated case to an end; that there is no foundation for an appeal to the Supreme Court at Washington for a writ of certiforari, and that the result should be immediate release of the securities deposited by the defendants following the jury verdict in favor of the plaintiffs.

Bishop William Lawrence will retire from his office as Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of Massachusetts tomorrow. The responsibilities of the diocese will fall automatically upon Bishop Coadjutator Charles Lewis Slattery. Bishop Lawrence recently forwarded his resignation to the presiding bishop, John Gardner Murray, Bishop of Maryland. Owing largely to Bishop Lawrence's initiative and organization ability, $3,000,000 was collected as a pansion fund in 1916 for Episcopal clergy in the United States and their dependent families.

Born in Bostom, May 30, 1850, he became Bishop of Massachusetts in 1893, succeeding Bishop Brooks. Before his consecration as bishop he had served as dean of the Episcopal Theological School in Combridge. He is a graduate and fellow of Harvard University, and president of the Board of Directors of Wellesley College.

Bishop Lawrence displayed his energies in many directions. He gathered a fund to aid the needy parishes in his diocese to obtain rectories. He was instrumental in ratsing $1,000,000 to increase salaries of teachers at Harvard and also of another fund, exceeding $1,000,000, for Wellesley College.

MR. HUGHES SEES TO LIMIT ARMS

Ban on "Provocative" Armaments Urged by Former Secretary of State

SAYS NO BETTER TIME WILL EVER BE FOUND

Declares Defenseless People Have Never Been in More Danger-Praises Court

WASHINGTON, April 29 (AP)-International agreement to do away with "provocative" armament is urged by Charles E. Hughes.

The former Secretary of State, in his annual address as president of the American Society of International Law, declared there should be binding compacts, clearly worded, among the leading powers against excesses in armaments and disregard of noncombatants in warfare.

"It would be idle," he said, "to expect a more favorable time for the limitation of armaman's them."

To have done otherwise, he said, would have been provocative.

Hancful of Agreement

Hopeful of Agreement Mr. Hughes declared he looked Mr. Hughes declared he looked-with hope toward the proposed three-power naval conference at Geneva between the United States, Great Britain and Japan, and said it seemed to him "entirely practicable to find appropriate arrangements by which they can agree without sacri-ficing any reasonable demands of protection and defense."

Mr. Hughes expressed regret that international agreement had not been reached on limiting use of polsonous gases, aerial bombardments and other newer developments in warfare for the obliteration of whole populations in future wars.

"There are several and contradictory reasons for this apparent indifference," he asserted. "Fundamentally, it appears that the compelling sentiment does not exist. First, there are those who are so intent on abolishing war that they have no patience with regulations of war. There are others, perhaps as numerous, who are satisfied that nothing can prevent war. Then there are those who, in their desire to abolish war, wish to make it as horrible as possible.

Decries Preparation for Violence
"It would appear to be worthy of consideration that if there is not a sufficiently compelling humans sentiment to induce agreement, if war should come, to mitigate unnecessary crueities and to spare noncompatants from unrestrained violence, little progress has been made in cultivating the reasonable disposition by which war may be prevented. Peoples which deliberately prepare for such violence are those which are likely to indict it.

Mr. Humber continued, in part, as Mr. Hughes continued, in part, as

mr. Rugales continued, in part, as follows:

"It would seem to be clear enough that apprehension of the cruelties of war has never prevented war. It would also seem to be clear that you cannot rely on declarations, or resolutions, or papers, to prevent war, unless back of all these is the triumph of the spirit of reasonableness among peoples who have ceased to think in terms of war; a habit of peace which will not be found while causes of strife still exist, dreams of successful appeals to force for the sion of power continue to fascinate and nations are so intent on prepara-tion for fighting that they find it im-possible to agree upon any measure for the reduction or limitation o burdensome expenditures of arma

Canadian Minister Asks Its Aid in Diplomacy—Gov. Ritchie Speaks

NEW YORK, April 29 (P)—The press, as the representative of the people, must aid diplomacy to achieve its task of furthering a better understanding between nations. Vincent Massey, Canadian Minister to the United States, said in an address before the bureau of advertising of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association. CHICAGG, April 29—Preparing for a more thorough study of religions education in church and school, the Religious Education Association tyoted to raise a special fund of $17,000 for expansion and research in this field next year.

A study of character education in universities was proposed by Dr. J. M. Artman, general secretary of the association. "It would be valuable," he said, "if we could discover the characteristics of the teacher who releases students in an upward growing process, of character development." Dr. Artman declared that not enough was known of the causes which for example, led a certain ethics teacher to break down the character building process of students while a teacher of to resure the causes which for example, led a certain ethics teacher to break down the character building process of students while a teacher of forestry in the same institution was noted for his constructive influence.

Princeton Head Would Recognize Interdependence of Individuals Within World as Well as Interdependence of Individuals in Nation

Development of an American foreign policy that will recognize the interdependence of nations within the world as well as the interdependence of individuals within the nation was urged by Dr. John Grier Hibben, president of Princeton University, in delivering the Godkin lecture at Harvard last night.

The Godkin lectureship was established in 1904 by friends of Edward L. Godkin, for many years editor of The Nation, for the annual discussion of the subject, "Free Government and the Duties of Citizenship."
Dr. Hibben treated the relations of the individual to society, and of nations to the society of mations.

""As the fundamental basis of citizenship in the words of Dostolevsky, said Dr. Hibben; "we were born in order that we might live together."

"As the fundamental basis of citizenship in the resources," he said, directs and inspires individual effects and novels on the character of the present generation, said that "there is opportunity for our country to promote the cause of international country throughout the country to promote the cause of international country throughout the would not shrink from it."

Association in its efforts to escape the encirclement which Italy is trying to effect. France though showing friendship for Turkey and Jugoslavia, does not appear inclined to enter into the torinous plans which are designed to remove the Balkans from Italian hegemony. Like the Lities Entente, it will be content to wait and see.

Unquestionably there is a shifting of the center of gravity which was, when France had a stronger influence over the Little Entente, further west. Italy has made a bid for Balkanic control, bringing both Rumania and Hungary into its orbit. It has brought even Jugoslavia until the dispute arose about Albania.

The counter-move comes from Turkey, where, according to Paris reports, Dr. Tewfik Sushdi Bey seeks to construct a federation, principally based on Angora and Belgrades. It is those on Angora and Belgrades. It is those on Angora and Belgrades. It is those on Angora and Belgrades in Control, bringing to the content to wait and it is believed that a decree will shortly be issued depriving Signor Nitti of his Italian citizenship.

spiration with the object of increasing Turkish influence.

Moreover, these chess-board combinations in Europe recall the complicated pre-war diplomacy. The central fact is that Italy is determined to play a foremost rôle, making friends with this nation and becoming the enemy of that. Franco-Italian rivalry is such that these matters are watched closely on this side of the Alps. Action Française raises a cry of warning that much Italian anger is directed against France for its alleged backing of Jugoslavia. STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Calif. STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Calif. (Special Correspondence)—Housed in a small wooden building which had been outgrown by its older equipment, the Pacific Coast Standford Frequency Station of Stanford University, 6XBM, has achieved a good record for efficient operation. Since its first beginning, Sept. 5, 1925, it has, except for a few university of the stanford of the st schedule.

6XBM works with the bureau of giandards' station WWV at Washington, D. C., and sends out standard frequency signals. The station uses two transmitting sets on a master-oscillator power-amplifier system, one for lower frequencies, between 125 and 1500 kilocycles, and one for frequencies between 1500 and 5000.

The two antennæ form possibly the most interesting part of the equipment. They are approximately 85 feet high. The longer one is made of six cables 150 feet long and arranged in a hexagonal cage. By this, frequencies from 125 to 1000 kilo-cycles can be transmitted. The shorter aerial, 25 feet long, is used for frequencies between 1200 and

In those days the new art was struggling under the problems of where best to place the condensers are adjusted to produce approximately the desired frequency, the power output being kept limstruments, and the reduction of discorting echees. One room where all the radiocasting took place was usually draped, practically, and not especially artistically. One's entrance circuit is tuned to resonance with the master oscillator frequency by sidusting for maximum antenna current.

There is an old saying, something about the first impression being the most lasting and important. Radiomost and important. Radiomost and important resonance with the most lasting and important resonance.

Then to secure maximum output, the capacity of the coupling con-denser is increased and the plate is of the antenna inductor adjusted bring the plate current to approx-

Does radio interfere with clocks and watches? The suggestion is not a new one, but renewed interest has been given to it in England by an announcement of the manager of the Savoy Hotel, London, who says that from now onward every one of the 1050 clocks in the newly constructed hotel will be worked and tuned by electricity to insure scrupulous time.

This is exactly what characterized the shows written by that versatile American, Jerome Kern, and produced between 1914 and 1918. Several of these were of the famous Princess Theater group. NDIANS PROTESTING FISHING REGULATIONS

Motion pictures are being brought closer and closer to radio. We do not mean television, but the use of VICTORIA, B. C. (Special Corre-pondence) — British Columbia In ans are protesting against present government fishing regulation ich restrict them in their fishing erations. Chief David, head of the anich tribe near Victoria, has ritten a letter to the press attack-g these restrictions and declaring that they violate early agreements made with the natives.

"Now I am old the policeman mes and forbids me to take my od," Chief David wrote. "The hite people take thousands of fish traps, seine boats and purse tines. When I take a few fish for againes. When I take a few lish for deod the policeman stops me. We have been good to the white people. Why do the white people make me deal sad?"

that a competitive sense ruled the producers.

After three years of radio, the motion picture houses are still well filled night after night and this fear of loss has subsided. Nineteen stations will be linked Saturday evening in what we believe is the first really serious attempt to advertise a motion picture by radio when "The Yankee Clipper" will be exploited. In order that the musical end of the program will not lag, Roxy and His Gang have been engaged to engineer the performance, giving an hour's program with nautical dressing.

The story deals with the romantic days when the United States was quite supreme on the high seas. Clipper ships were then the fastest craft afoat. In making the picture, a trip to Alaska was necessary to find probably the only two existing ships of that type. Now if we had television we could see these. If words and music can convey the impression, however, it will certainly be done in the program which starts at 2 o'clock Saturday evening.

There is an old saying, something about the first impression being the most lasting and important. Radiocasting studios of today are designed with that idea in view, and the accompanying photograph shows the luxurious design of the anteroom of the Grebe studios, Station WABC. After a quiet rest in this room, the artist steps into the studio ready to give his or her best. From how on, perhaps, it will turn into a neck-andneck race between motion picture producers and radiocasting studio Tomorrow

Alaskan Vacations

A trip to the top of the world—Alaska—will give you a vacation that is different! Alaska is vast—strange—exotic—with the lure of the Northland.
There are glaciers that are blue rivers of ice moving down to the sea and breaking off into icebergs—Eskimaux—rugged men of the sea who bring in the salmon and the seal—weird totem poles—mountains of gigantic size.
At night the northern lights shoot their colored fire across the sky—and the sum shines at midnight! Alaska is a land of haunting beauty—of charm irresistible!
You'll enjoy the journey-to Alaska.
Two thousand miles of startling beauty across the continent to Seattle on the North Coast Limited! A sea voyage across the shimmering waters of Puget Sound and up the famous inside passage to an unknown land!
Stops at quaint romantic cities—Ketchikan—Wrangell—Petersburg—Juneau. Skagway, the boom town that sprang to life in a night during the days of the Klondike gold stampede. Sitka, the old Russian capital of Alaska with the snow-capped Seven Sisters to the east.
Southwestern Alaska is a fascinating

TWO NEW YORK TOWNS VOTE TO CONSOLIDATE

BUFFALO, N. Y., April 29 (AP)-At a special election Niagara Falls voted 2721 to 1686 to merge with the village of La Salle. La Salle taxpayers previously had voted in favor of annexation.

The consolidation of the two municipalities will become effective May 28, the Legislature having provided for its effectiveness 30 days after final approval by the taxpayers. Village officials will go out of office, but members of the La Salle police and fire departments will function as Niagara Falls city employees. The greater city will have a population of approximately 75,000.

On Public Utility Control-On recemmendation by Governor Fuller and also by the Public Utilities Commission on the Shattuck order, the Leg-islature passed the bill, effective imediately, empowering the commis-on to make rate reduction induiries on its own motion as well as petition, and to control minimum as well as maximum rates for elec-tricity, gas and water. The House obtained a report on the utility capi-talization problem, recommending no legislation at present. It postponed to hext year the bill to prevent acquisi-tion of companies by out-of-state holding corporations. The Legislafure asked a report on possible changes in the method of providing financial support on the Utilities Department. A bill for high-voltage lines through nonassenting towns

On Taxation—On the gasoline tax bill, which passed both houses, the Governor first asked an amendment, and that failing, he vetoed it. The House failed to override the veto, though recording a majority for the bill. The resolve for creation of a special commission to study all the tax laws of the State was adopted. The Legislature extended the estate tax law under the Federal Estate Tax Act and repealed the inherstance tax on intangible property of nonresidents. It rejected the tax commissioner's recommendation on the "dividend credit" allowed forcorporations under the income tax. It rejected the automobile ex-

What the session did may be summarized a conditional conditions for major changes in the compulsory liability insurance law were postponed to next year. The Legislature adopted a resolve to establish a State Traffic Commission, postponed code, and dismissed proposals both of the Judicial Council and the State Registrar for handling the State Registrar for handling petty traffic violations. The House rejected the bill to permit longer

On Labor Legislation—The Legislature formulated and enacted a bill making more than a score of liber-alizing revisions in the workmen's compensation law, one of which indecisively the petition of the cotton mill owners for modification of the women's 48-hour law. The so-called "sue bill" to make voluntary associa-tions, including labor unions, liable to suit for money damages, was referred to the next annual session, and the bill to broaden the scope of NEW HAVEN ROAD the law against unwarranted strikes and lockouts was rejected.

On Water Supply Projects — The Legislature drew up and passed the bill finally authorizing construction of the Swift River Reservoir under a $50,000,000 bond issue as a supply for the Metropolitan District making the terms of compensation for the lands and communities which are to be flooded. It also passed the $900,000 appropriation bill to bring in the South Sudbury water supply, and adopted resolves for a study of the question of enlarging the dis-trict served by the metropolitan supply and for investigation of water supplies for Essex County. The Watuppa Water Board bill for Fall River was dropped due to disagreement between the two houses.

On Prohibition—The House jected, on a roll call in which the Speaker cast the deciding vote, the petition for a state referendum on opinion as to repeal or modification of the national prohibition laws. En-actment of a state "padlock law" against liquor nuisances was re-fused. Petitions to strengthen the law on issuance of search warrants liquor is sold were rejected. On Judicial Affairs—The House re jected a number—of petitions for abolishment of capital punishment. Petitions for a "Baumes law" on repeated felonies were also rejected in the Senate in view of existing statutes which are applicable. The petition for a "criminal syndicalism" law was thrown out. Proposals for law was thrown out. Froposais and a study of the district court system were lost in disagreement between the houses. An act revising the "poor debtor law" was passed and signed.

It defeated a proposal for investigation of the textile industry, rejected a bill to increase the age for compulsory school attendance, defeated a bill to increase the age for compulsory school attendance, defeated a bill to provide a fine for causing forest fires by dropping lighted smoking materials out of automobiles, rejected bills to further regulate admission to the practice of law and of medicine, and rejected petitions for a system of old-age pensions. It ignored the Governor's recommendation to consider abolishment or revision of State employees' pensions. It ordered a study of plans "for preserving natural scenery along the Mohawk Trail and Jacob's Ladder The rule forbidding the pledging of freshmen to fraternities was adopted by the trustees at the suggestion of Dr. Clarence C. Little, now head of the University of Michigan, head of the University of Michigan, and was to have become effective next fall. It was reasoned then, that compelling students to live together in dormitories during their first year would bring about better class and college spirit than obtains when the first-year students are members of fraternities. Fraternity spirit, it was argued, often became stronger than either class or college spirit.

In addition, it was held, the rule would give entering students opportunity to look around, get acquainted with the members of the various fraternities, and decide which they would prefer to join. Under the present arrangement of "rushing" freshmen it was felt that they could hardly get a suitable opportunity to judge serving natural scenery along the Mohawk Trail and Jacob's Ladder state highways. The vote followed debate in which several representatives criticised Governor Fuller for vetoing the bill after having asked for a gasoline tax bill in his annual message. Representative Joseph Martin of Marblehead challenged the accuracy of the figures upon which the Commissioner of Public Works advised the Governor that revenue under the new bill would fall $500,000 short of present registration collections. Even if this should occur, he asked why the Governor, who advocates tax reductions, while the third annual New England Hotel Men's Exposition at Horticultural Hall nears its close, officers today said, this forum for the exchange of idea and progressive plan provides an ideal medium of study for attending hotel men and affords the public an instructive and interpretive view of the aspirations and problems of the modern hotel.

Representative Aifred W. Ingalls of Lynn also spoke in this vein.

"Vermont and New Hampshire Day" with emphasis on the great stretches of country in the Green and White Mountains which have remained happily untouched by attempts to mould them too rigidity to the modern summer playground pattern, was observed today and several centers whose flavor has become sophisticated with the passing years and the building of pretentious hotels were stressed.

In particular relation to development of the mountains as summer resorts attention was given to the coincidental work of the Appalachian Mountain Club, the Field and Forest Club and similar organiza-

Bennington Sesquicentennial Plans Are Now Well Under Way

Entire State of Vermont to Take Part in Celebration at Which President Coolidge Will Be Chief Guest of Honor and Deliver an Address on August 16

BENNINGTON, Vt., April 29 (Special)—While Vermont State as a whole will this summer celebrate the one hundred and fifteth anniversary of its independence, the largest celebration will occur in Bennington the week of Aug. 14, when the one hundred and fifteth anniversary of the Battle of Bennington and the independence of the State will be observed jointly. Plans for the event here are well under way.

Nestled in the foothills of the Green Mountains, Bennington, with a population of less than 10,000, is undertaking to present an exposition of magnitude never before attempted by a community of its size in this section of the country.

The chief guest of honor will be President Coolidge, who will come here on Aug. 15 and deliver an address. Arrangements have already been made to radiocast his address on a national scale.

More than 100,000 persons are expected to attend the celebration, which will start Sunday morning, which will start Sunday morning.

"A Common Denominator" Paris has no rival on the continent.

There may be other cities which are regarded with as much affection, as much esteem, by the men and women in whose country they stand; but there are assumed to have carts. There are the paris and patient horses stand harnessed to have carts. there is assuredly no city which is so generally accepted by the men and women of other nations as their second home. The Englishman will naturally give London the foremost place, the American New York, and the German Berlin; but the Englishman, the American, and the German will undoubtedly agree—their own city set aside—on the position of Paris in the hierarchy of cities. With the exception of London, to Empire and from the mighty Eng-lish-speaking lands across the seas, there is no place which attracts citizens of all climes, colors, customs, as does Paris. This is not a state-

Paris for the traveler has a peculiar fascination. No other city in the world possesses it in like degree. There are fairer cities, older cites, more significant cities, but none surpasses it in completeness and charm. The mighty monuments of ancient Rome, the noble beauty and historic appeal of Athens, the Byzantine glamour of Constantinople, are thrilling. New York impresses us with the spectacle of modern human achievements; London touches us deeply by its richness, its multitudinousness, its extent, its antiquity, its amazing solidity. Some years ago an official work on the public ways appeared, announcing that the municipal authorities reserved the designation of boulevard to the thoroughfare from the Madeleine to the Bastille, and that all other boulevards, created or projected, would in future be avenues. The idea was good, but it was abandoned. Paris is full of boulevards and avenues which cannot be distinguished one from the other. The difference of denomination is due to wide and animated and banked with high buildings to be a boulevard. Otherwise London and New York could show as much. In a large hall capable of seating an audience of approximately 1206 persons, documentary films edited by industrialists will be shown. The detailed program will make known the exact time at which each film will be presented. Thus an exhibitor, knowing that views of his factory will be shown at 3:50 p. m., for ex-ample, will be enabled to give the foreign buyer an idea of the activi-ties of his house without having to leave the premises of the fair.

University City Thus, on the left bank of the river Thus, on the left bank of the river, rose the great university city, upon its hill, and within it the world-famous Sorbonne, still by far the most fascinating part of Paris, to them that love learning and ancient poetry and would be where François Villon and his rag-tag fellows have been.

No man really understands the Paris of the past, who looking down from the height of the Sorbonne, upon the Isle de la Cité, its ancient roofs dominated by the towers of Nôtre Dame, and thange to the great modern town, upon the further bank beyond, does not visualize historically the sequence of three towns that succeeding one another down the centuries make the Paris we know today—on the island the city, the ecclesiastical and once also the judicial center, from which Paris grew; then, at his feet the university, and northward scross the free; Cité, Université and Ville—or modern town. There, in three words, is all Paris through the ages.

The fifteenth century city comes next into our story—the walled and battlemented medieval fortress-town that, because it held for the wrong

History of the Fascinating Capital of France Traced
From Its Barbaric Days

PARIS (Special Correspondence)—
The harsh and strident rumor of Paris, is in the ears of the writer—Paris that "roars, so loud, and thunders in the index," and will continue to do so ceaselessly, releatiessly, until long after midnight, when, at last, for a few hours, the great city seleps.

lessly, until long after midnight, when, at last, for a few hours, the great city sleeps.

But this is not the Paris which is recalled; but the old Paris, not yet altogether vanished, though fast vanishing, beneath the pickaxes of the "démolliseurs"—the town within a town that still raises, here and there, a head of hoary stone to remind us of its ancient birthright of dignity and beauty—the fascinating Paris that was.

More than 2000 years ago the story began, when, upon the ahip-ahape little island in the Seine, a ship appeared in full sail and landed a wild Gallic tribe, the Parisii, who built their mud huts, which, in time, were supplanted by the gleaming temples, palaces and villas of the Romans, when the great Lutetia rose above the waters. Not many vestiges of that proud city have survived, but near the Cluny Museum one may still see the ruins of the Roman baths, and on the University Hill, the great oval hollow of the amphitheater—the Avenu de Lutèce, as it is called today.

Stand today beneath the great acacla tree, that throws its shadow upon the oldest of all existing churches of Paris—St. Julien des Pauvress, onpositis to Notre Dame. when, at last, for a few hours, the Cluny, which now houses the fasci-

The Place Vendome is one of the places we go to and through nowadays in the rush of traffic.

A long time ago in 1713 when Mansart planned the houses that surround it, it was given the august title of "Place Louis le Grand," but no one ever called it that. They all called it just what we do today. "The Place Vendome" In those days the traffic roar was made up of the rumble of coaches, the clatter of hoofs and the loud ring of lackeys heels on the ample paving stones. But one day in 1792 when Louis XVI's throne was tottering at Versailles, a man mamed Chenier ordered the statue of "Le Grand," but no the Place Vendome as souvenir of the Mapoleonic reign, for in 1831 Louis Philippe caused a new status of the Emperor, in a greatcost that three-cornered hat, to be placed on the summit. But Napoleon III results a placed this in 1833 by one resembling the original figure. In 1871 the entire column was pulled down by the Communards.

Fortunately the fragments were preserved and it was re-erected in 1872 as we have it today. Small wender that Victor Hugo wrote the "ôde a la Colonne."

The architect of Versailles, Harlouin Mansart, designed the square with its fine curve and symmetrical façade, and neither curve nor façade has been disturbed in a city which is jealous of its stately frontage and sky line. Among the historical personages who lived in the square is John Law, the Scotsman who, in the time of the Regency, set France speculating, until in a frenzy of fictitious prosperity, the financial bubble burst. The Rits Hotel was once occupied by the Duc de Lauzun. Danton must often have visited the Ministry of Justice next door. Chopin lived in the square in 1849. After the war the dressmakers were admitted into the Salon d'Automne to give exhibitions of their own. They claim that dressmaking deserves its place among the arts. There is indeed an indefinable quality in their creations which is not altogether the result of mere technique and patience. Curiously, it appears to be impossible to transplant the best workers, for when they are separated from their base their skill diminishes. The blouses that go with the tailor-mades are simple in shape but heavily worked with tucks and openwork, with little open necks.

PARIS (Special Correspondence)

—Paris is known to the whole world as the central market for the clothes of women and all their numerous appurtenances, and it is, of course, known in many corners of the world that Paris has to offer an unrivaled wealth of art treasures.

As in the nature of things there is only one man who can buy the bigfest pearl necklace in the world and only a few who can constitute collections which vie for importance with the public museums, there remains the market in which the man of modest purse, the foreign visitor, and the moderately wealthy bargain for more humble objects of artistic merit. There is newhaps no city in merit. There is penhaps no city in Europe which forms so ideal a hunt-ing ground for this vast category of hasers. The difficulty is to put the right buyer in touch with the right source of supply. It may prove helpful, therefore, to examine some of the many aspects of the art trade

Pantheon de la Guerre Leaves France for United States Tour

public-spirited men both in France and the United States who have advanced the money that makes the whole undertaking possible. Building to Be Razed

It is understood that in the mean time the building in which the Pantheon de la Guerre has been ex-Pantheon de la Guerre has been et hibited since the war, and which was not constructed as a permanent housing, is to be torn down to make way for a modern apartment house. The noted painting, which has been seen by several million per-sons since it was placed on exhibi-tion in Paris at the close of the tion in Paris at the close of the World War, is the result of an inspirational idea conceived by P. Carrier Belieuse and A. F. Gorguet, distinguished artists who, assisted by other able painters, believed no greater or better thing could be done when the war began in 1914, than to buoy up the morale of those fighting for the cause of France by painting a mighty victory picture which should accurately describe the principal battle fields of the struggle and portray by groups the struggle and portray by groups the nations fighting as allies.

Without recording a single horror, or even indicating bloodshed, the great story was gradually put on canvas, the artists often being able to hear the thunder of artillery as the second battle of the Marne was fought and as they went on with their work. The painting when completed constituted what is said to be the largest panorama ever completed constituted what is said to be the largest panorama ever done, carrying more than 6000 in-dividual portraits, of which over 2000 are listed and quickly rec-ognizable as leaders and heroes of those momentous days. ous days.

In Madison Square Garden The painting will be exhibited at the new Madison Square Garden in New York City from May 15 to Nov.

of the World War, has been removed from its home at 148 rue de l'Université, where it has been on exhibition for eight years, and sent to the United States under the auspices of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation.

It took a large number of skilled workmen to remove the great canvas, pack it carefully in the cradle built for it, sheath the huge package in metal and barge it down the Seine to Havre where it was placed on an ocean liner with New York as its destination.

But one day the panorama will come back to France. That will be when the people of the United States and Canada have seen it and the inspiring picture has been similarly shown in South America and England. Chairman, Division of Home-Making Department of the American Home,
General Pederation of Women's Clubs

THE season of annual conventions of women's clubs and other torganisations are closing their year with a meeting where they may report the achievements of the past season and plan the work for another year.

Among the most interesting of the part interesting of splendidly trained young women black the first the first time and many of the demonstration for strength of the church in solving these problems. Clergymen are requested to give especial attention to home and family life in their sermons at this time and many of the demonstration houses are opened with a dedication service of prayer and song and the lighting of a fire on the hearth. In these busy days, teeming with many activities and amusements, it is tremendously important to turn our attention often to what Edgar Guest calls the "simple and lasting things."

Among the most interesting of

Among the most interesting of these conventions will be the annual meeting of the American Home Economics Association which will be held in Asheville, North Carolina, June 21 to 24, 1927. The association could hardly have chosen a more delightful spot for the meeting. The mountains of western North Carolina are particularly lovely in June. Miss Jane McKimmon, who has charge of arrangements for the convention, says that the whole South is looking forward to the coming of the teachers and others who are members of the association.

One innovation on the program should be particularly helpful and, since it is to come at the opening session, should help in having a clear vision of the aims of the association of the aims of the association of the service to fefinite value.

Guest calls the "simple and lasting the book which we have mentioned so many times in this column, "Religious Education in the Family". Looking at the great dome, I would, I am sure, find y impressions gloriously colored the thought of his intense ad-iration not only for it but for its London prototype, which he was yet to see as a Treasury clerk on official business abroad. And climbing the marble steps, I needs must hesitate and listen for the echoes of his voice—a deep, rich baritone—mingled with the thin, high-pitched tones of "glorious old Walt," the friend of his seeking, who had drawn him to the city ways as the meant drawn to the city even as the magnet draws its load. To feel myself there with the talkers, to catch fragments of their ardent discussions of immor-tality, I would consider sweet com-pensation indeed for all the strategic libustering so lost.

If I had a sufficiency of time, I would attempt to find the quaint brick house near by, or at any rate the site of it, where the talkers of the steps had just partaken of Mrs. Burroughs' delicious breakfast of pancakes and maple syrup from the Catskills, where dwelt Chloe, "the rural divinity," and where an im-mense garden in the very shadow of the Capitol dome afforded genial rec-reation for the country-bred Treas-ury clerk—and not a little amuseury clerk-and not a little amusement for the political passers-by.

After that I would trace the foo steps of the talkers, who were the city's most enthusiastic pedestrians, and quite conspicuous in that day of crowded horse cars and resplend. ent carriages, down historic Penn-sylvania Avenue toward Harvey's Restaurant, where they so often paused for feasts of oysters and p closophy on the high stools. Here I would detour, turning southward toward the grounds of the Smith-sonian Institution, where the budding ornithologist observed the return o the fox sparrow and other rare species, recorded in his notes and

Poppies of Paestum (At the Temple of Neptune)

Written for The Christian Science Monitor The scarlet poppies flash from narrow rifts Of weathered stone, the coiling vines enfold In sinuous clasp the fluted shaft that lifts Its shattered glory from the days of old.

Here in these halls, where winds loud-echoing sweep Through desolate aisles, and where the vocal sea Sings many-voiced,—deep calling unto deep— Were temples once adorned in majesty.

Here joyous throngs of white-robed maidens chanting Bright leaf-green wreaths on this bare altar flung. Their flute-like voices still these columns haunting-

And here the storm-tossed mariner at last Hymned mighty Neptune in triumphant song; But now no incense on these altars cast Can rouse those ancient gods asleep so long.

Only the far-off murmur of the wave, Only the drowsy ebbing of the tide, Sucking the pebbles from some shadowy cave, Disturb this sea of slience vast and wide.

These towering columns now can never tell
The mystic, veiled enchantments they have knownBut scarlet poppies cast their slumbrous spell,
And Paestum broods on her deep dream alone.

It was in the depths of a wonderful forest, green with summer and hoary with age. He was sitting on the ground in a small open space. No path led to this or away from it, but all around him grew grasses and plants which would be natural coverts for wild creatures. We have could see every mark of identification. The bird had come cut of the dense growth and tread had ever crushed those plants.

The time must have been near noonday; for as Webster looked sarpling about twenty feet from the arth, in his grace and shapeliness and manly character. With a swift, gliding flight downward he lighted on of leaves, slender beams of sunlight. In his grace and shapeliness and manly character. With a swift, gliding flight downward he lighted on a sweeping limb of a tree still filtered perpendicularly down, growing mister as they descended until they could be traced no longer even as luminous vapor; no palest radional area from them reached the grass.

These graduates were fundamentally Arab, used the Arabic language, but were trained in the American manner, which the Iraqi Government liked. Therefore they invited a few of them to come over to Bagdad and organize a school system. Slowly the foundations were laid in primary and then secondary schools for boys, with Arabic as the medium of instruction, and English as a secondary language, taught in the upper grades. Then came primary schools for girls, starting with the first grade alone and gradually adding one year at a time, until now there is one public school which teaches through six grades. Even yet, however, the work is not very thorough and a large proportion of the girls of the city do not attend any school.

No College Men in Utah Prison

THE recent survey of education in Utah included the work of the penal institutions. The purpose of the institutions was viewed as being twofold—to protect society and to salvage men. In the opinion of the survey staff, society can protect itself best by salvaging all prisoners who are to be returned to it. The salvaging of men involves educational procedures. Inmates are persons out of adjustment with physical or social laws. Social adjustment is primarily a conscious process. For this reason, it is

PRINCETON HAS TEN VETERANS

Tiger Baseball Coach Has Had to Develop New Pitching Staff

PRINCETON, N. J., April 29 (Spe-al)—Showing greatly improved form field and at the plate as a result of s trip South during Easter vacation, the Princeton varsity baseball nine began the serious part of its schedule last Saturday by taking a brilliant victory from Williams College in a 10-inning contest in a way which victory from williams College in a 10-inning contest in a way which seems to hold forth considerable prom-ies for the rest of the schedule. Princeton has now secured six vic-tories out of 10 starts in a 28-game tories out of 10 starts in a 28-game schedule.

The diamond situation at Princeton is unusual this year in that 10 letter men and a host of experienced sophomores are available; but few dependable pitchers are included in the number. Battery practice began March 10 with only one man, J. G. Kellogg '27, who had never pitched a full game successfully. Kellogg was the mainstay in the box last season. F. K. Rankin '28, who earned his varsity "P'' last year also reported for duty, but Pitching Coach J. W. Coombs found in two sophomorees, F. O. Palmer and H. A. Heydt Jr., material that seemed to show greater potentiality than either Kellogg or Rankin. In addition to these four, F. C. Bauchens '28, W. W. Candy Jr. '28, E. E. Baruch '29, Mortimer Feldman '29, J. D. Reifsnyder '29, J. C. Murphy '29 and P. L. Wardenburg '29 were also available.

Behind the bat four men struggled on even terms for the first few days, but of these J. W. Lewis '28. last year's catcher, and J. R. Bridges '28, also a football star, were singled out as most likely candidates.

Infield Greatly Shifted

Infield Greatly Shifted Inneld Greatly Shifted

In view of an unexpectedly abundant supply of infield talent, the lineup sketched on paper before the opening of practice did not last long. Capt. R. W. Labeaume '27 was shifted from his old position at first base to shortstop, and J. T. Emert '29 was groomed to take charge of first base. Evans Hicks '29, who had been playing first-class baseball at second since his schooldays at Lawrenceville, assumed his old post without serious compeachooldays at Lawrenceville, assumed his old post without serious competition. At third W. F. Scharnikow '27 and P. H. Strubing 2d '29 had a hard struggle, with honors going to the former. Strubing later won a regular outfield position. After the assignment of regular infield position, six second-string men of almost as much ability were left over as substitutes.

J. W. Slagle '27 his batting eve J. W. Slagle '27 his batting eye keener than ever, was detailed to occupy left field. W. M. Hardt 2d '28, was given a slight edge over W. J. Rhees '27, last year's regular at center field, while L. S. Stewart '29, was pushed hard, but in vain by H. K. Brahmall '29, in right field. The arms of the latter two men were undeveloped, but they covered much ground in chasing flies.

Having settled his lineup, the next task awaiting Coach William Clarke was to determine the most effective batting order. The question was undecided until after the first few games. Emert Is Leading Hitter

In studying the score book it is evident that Princeton has several very consistent hitters. The average of Emert is the most impressive, he having been at bat 45 times, 9 more than LaBeaume. His mark is .400 and his hits include two triples and a home run. Catcher Lewis has an average of .429 for 28 trips to the plate with a home run and two other extra-base hits to his credit. Lewis has scored 11 runs to date. Bridges, also a catcher; is hitting at the unusual percentage of .500 in 12 times at bat. Captain LaBeaume is hitting .388 with 14 hits, and Pitcher Fred Bauchens has a mark of

In the box Heydt has the best rec-In the box Heydt has the best record, three wins and no defeats. He has pitched 24 2-3 innings, yielding 16 hits and given two bases on balls. Kellogg has won three and lost one in 21 innings of pitching. He has given 22 hits and passed 12. He and Heydt have each struck out six. Palmer, Bauchens, and Rankin have each lost one game. The former has struck out 11, but this is offset by his 21 bases on balls and four wild pitches.

SEVEN U. S. RIFLE STARS TO COMPETE

Will Try to Capture World Title at Rome

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 29—Seven of America's premier riffemen have been selected to represent the United States in the international rifle matches to be held at Rome, Italy, in May. The seven, who will go abroad soon, made the best scores in the preliminary tests, just concluded at Quantico. Va., near here.

With a possible high score of 1800 points, the high man in the tryouts was First Lieutenant P. M. Martin, United States Army, who led the field with a score of 1862; second, L. Nuesslein, civilian, 1540; third, Private First Class R. F. Seitzinger, United States Marines, 1522; fourth, W. L. Bruce, civilian, 1514; fifth, Gunnery Sergeant R. O. Coulter, United States Marines, 1513; sixth First Lieutenant M. W. Dodson, Pennsylvania National Guard, 1510; and seventh, Sergeant L. Lach, United States Marines, 1504.

Maj. Harry L. Smith of the Marine Corps will conduct the team abroad in an effort to capture the international shooting laurels won by the Swiss in 1925.

GIANTS TAKE LEAGUE LEAD

NEW YORK, April 29—New York gained the lead in the National League by defeating the Boston Braves here yesterday, 4 to 3, giving the Giants the majority of victories in the games played between the two clubs thus far this season with three victories and two defeats. Robert Smith pitched for the losers and held the Giants to seven hits, one less than his team mates made. A double by Farrell in the fifth put the Giants shead and a home run by Roush clinched the game in the sixth.

Captain La-Beaume is hitting .385 with 14 hits, and Pitcher Fred Bauchens has a mark of .400 though he has been at bat but five times. Hicks is batting .345 and Hardt .333.

In fielding LaBeaume and Emert have done good work, while Hicks has been dependable at second. In the outfield, Slagle has appeared the best, with Strubing close behind. Strubing leads in base stealing with seven and Hicks and Slagle each have four. The catchers have allowed very few passed balls.

In the box Heydt has the best rec-speed, and was responsible for a greatinumber of earned points.

H. B. Swan '28 played next to Remington in the Boston University match. It is probable, however, that Swan will be forced from his position by Capt. P. D. O'Brien '27, the third of the three seniors. Swan defeated O'Brien in a preseason match between the two, and by virtue of this victory, earned the right to play ahead of his captain in the first match. O'Brien, however, has been off form throughout the preliminary training, and with the coming of warm weather should be able to defeat Swan when they meet again. Swan defeated O'Brien by steadiness. O'Brien plays a very spectacular game of tennis, and at times rises to great heights in his execution of shots; but he has a decided tendency to become unsteady, and fall into a prolonged slump when things are not shaping up very well. O'Brien's main forte is his service. He employs a very effective American twist, which is a hard by leave and form which he scores tive American twist, which is a hard ball to play, and from which he scores often on his opponents' errors. When he is in form, he plays a fine forehand and backhand drive, which go gen-erally deep, and allow him to take the erally deep, and allow him to take the net.

Swan's game is merely steadiness. He uses a chop drive, which is steadier than a free-arm drive; but cannot acquire the speed necessary to defeat an opponent well-versed in the tricks of tennis. Swan makes few errors, but he is at a decided disadvantage when faced by an opponent who can combine speed and accuracy.

Though these favorable financial conditions are not likely to repeat themselves, it is hoped that the experience of last year will induce visitors to return again this summer for the bathing season. In view of this, all kinds of preparations are being made in order to insure com-fort to visitors. Nice and Cannes which can rival the best world-renowned bathing places. Another attraction for summer visitors is provided by the numerous villages situated on the mountains at a short distance from the shore. They are seldom visited during the winter season because, owing to their altitude ranging from 800 to 100 maters, they are much exposed to the winds. Many of the permanent residents of the Riviera spend the summer months in these villages. The hotel accommodation is devoid of the luxuries one is used to at the fashionable seaside resorts, but, on the other hand, these villages provide the charm of primitive country life and beautiful scenery which can be best enjoyed during the summer, when light and coloring cannot be surpassed. Bear Sentiment Becomes More Conspicuous as the Market Recedes at the opening of today's stock market.

Oils were again liquidated freely, with several issues sinking into now low ground. Houston Oil opened 1½ points lower, International Nickel dropped a point, and United States Steel common, Allied Chemical, Baldwin and other popular industrials yielded fractionally.

Bangor & Aroostook opened with a block of 1200 shares at 94½, up 2½ points, and a new high record.

While the reaction was widely described as a further correction of a weakened technical condition, there was a tendency in some quarters to attribute some of the selling to the falliurs of the directors of the New York Federal Reserve Bank to decrease the rediscount rate, and the postponement of dividend action on Bethlehem Steel common, payments on which have been omitted since Oct. 1, 1924.

Some Good Railies

The decrease in freight car traffic and indications of a further falling off as a result of the Mississippi River flood, was associated with the liquidation of the rail shares, Delaware & Hudson and Atlantic Coast Line being the hardest hit in the early trading. The violent nature of this week's decline naturally led to the liquidation of impaired marginal accounts, numerous "stop loss" orders being touched off in recent speculative favorites.

Bangor & Aroostook broke 5 points from its early high before the end of the first half hour. Peerless Motors sank to a new 1927 low, and acute weakness also developed in United States Rubber, Du Pont and several other specialities.

Foreign exchanges opened firm, with demand sterling around $4.85 13-32, and French francs just above 3.91 cents.

Special buying operations were started in a number of stocks reputed to be under pool guidance, with the result that the professional element which had been selling the list freely became less confident of their position, and started to retire some of their contracts, causing rallies of 1 to 4 points.

The week-end rate for call loans as continued at 4 per cent. Bond Movement Narrow Price movements were narrow and irregular in the bond market today, with trading on a comparatively small scale.

with trading on a comparatively small scale.

Convertible issues again received attention, and a few bonds which appear in the list only occasionally were sought out. Among these, Sierre & San Francisco Power 5s wht up a point to par, a new high record. United States Steel sinking fund 5s were in fair demand, and moved up fractionally to a new high for the year. Eric convertible 4s advanced nearly a point on renewed buying. Andes Copper 7s were under pressure, and declined to a new 1927 low for the year.

Foreign bonds received only nominal attention. Rome City 6½s changed hands in fair numbers, but the price held steady.

United States Government

United States Government issues sagged a little.

LIVERPOOL, April 29 (P)—A report was current here today that a movement was on foot for the cotton brokers and merchants to combine and sell raw cotton for cash instead of the usual credit. > Steers Up 25 to 40 Cents-Hog Values at Low Point in Last Two Years

CHICAGO, April 29 (Special)—Fed steers advanced 25 to 40 cents, but are still 25 to 50 cents under the recent high time on the United States Yards at Chicago. Small receipts were the principal stimulating factor in the cuttle trade this week.

Hog values continued stubbornly downward, declines amounting to 25 to 30 cents, and uncovering at the low time the smallest prices paid during the last two years. Fat lambs advanced 50 cents, but fat sheep declined, acording to a review by the Bursau of Agricultural Economics, United States Department of Agriculture.

Prime heavy steers topped at $144

Bureau of Agricultural Economica, United States Department of Agriculture.

Prime heavy steers topped at $14, with a practical top of $13.75. Weight continued to command a substantial premium, largely $1 to $1.50 over comparable grade offerings scaling 1100 pounds downward, the premium being most marked on steers scaling 1200 pounds upward.

Weighty kinds continued scarce, and comprised in between grades for the most part although Colorado. Western Nebraska and Iowa sent in several long strings of well finished medium weight and weighty steers. Long yearlings $11.75, yearling heifers selling up to $10.65.

Demand for light yearling steers and light heifers, the latter being numerous, was snappy, practically all of these little cattle showing as much advance as weighty fat bullocks. The spread of $9.75 to $12 took most fat steers.

Light hogs topped at $10.75 early in Light hogs topped at $10.75 early in the week. As prices worked lower, the top fell to $10.55. Week-end improvement raised the top to $10.75 for 140 to 150-pound averages, 150 to 200-pound kinds going at $10.40 to $10.70. The spread has narrowed considerably, light hogs having suffered most on the protracted break.

Big heavy butchers sold at $9.75 to $9.90 at the low time, 320 to 350-pound averages closing the week at $3.90 to $10. The average cost of packer and averages closing the week at $3.90 to $10. The average cost of packer and shipper droves fell to $10.09 as the week closed, compared with $10.94. April 1 and $11.69 March 1.

In ovine classes wooled lambs were scarce, clippers furnishing most of the week's small supply. The first California apringers of the season arrived. Arizonas and natives also showin up, the former also being the first of the season from that section of the West.

Western coast spring lambs made $17.40 to $17.75, the latter priced offerings scaling 74 pounds. Sixty-nine-pound Arizonas reached $13. Old crop wooled lambs went to $17 on the closing season which was generally 50 cents above a week earlier, clippers reaching $16. reaching $16.

This Is Rather Interesting When we formed this Trust in 1924, we predicted, based on past history, that one profitable Common Stock would offset any losses on ten unprofitable stocks.

Massachusetts Investors Trust

This is actual experience. This Trust holds 135 common stocks. On April 15th, based on cost prices, 105 of these showed a profit and 30 a loss. But total net gain was over $600,000.

This is the interesting point. One stock of the 105 made up all the inventory loss of the 30 and a profit of over $5000 in addition.

The cost of a share in this Trust Fund is 721/2. Subject to change after April 30.

Let it be assumed, how-ever, that the information is ac-London HE great Masonic event of recent times has been the delivery of the Prestonian lecture. When Lof the Prestonian lecture. When this feature was revived by Grand Lodge in 1924, the reception accorded to it was—to say the least—unenthusiastic. English Freemasons seldom rise to spontaneous enthusiasm and are proverbially cautious, with the result that, when support in cluding, of course, the United Sates, with which the Grand Lodges of these countries is in communion. asm and are proverbially cautious, with the result that, when support is given to any appeal or scheme, it is the more solid and abiding. Moreof those countries is in communion.

No Freemason, however highly placed or whatever may be the "higher degree" to which he has attained, has any right to question any over, the scheme has been in abey-ance for so many years that the question was asked on every hand: "What is the Prestonian lecture?" It is still being asked even today. The lecture founded by the great Masonic writer, William Preston, who, in 1818, bequeathed £300 in 3 per cent Consolidated Bank Annuities, the interest of which was to be "applied to some well-informed Mason to deliver annually a lecture on the First, Second, or Third De-gree of the Order of Masonry accord-ing to the system practiced in the Lodge of Antiquity" during his mastership. For a number of years the bequest was acted upon, the first lecturer being Stephen Jones, who was Preston's biographer and his personal friend. After a few years, however, the practice ceased and for about 90 years no lecture under the trust was delivered. The fund gradu-ally accumulated and, in 1923, Lord Ampthill and Sir Kynaston Studd were appointed trustees for its ad-ministration. In the following year, Capt. C. W. Firebrace was appointed lecturer under a scheme adopted by Grand Lodge. He has since written the continuation of the History of the Lodge of Antiquity, one of the four lodges which assisted in the formation of the Grand Lodge of England in 1717, and as Preston was a member of that lodge, the first lecscheme, which involves an average contribution of 10 guineas from every member. One lodge, however, the Corinthian, which has a membership of nearly 200, has secured the coveted ture was delivered under the ægis of that body. Lionel Vibert, another well-known figure in the realm of Masonic research, held the office for 1925 and 1926, and this year the ap-pointment has been given to Gordon of nearly 300, has secured the coveted distinction as the result of persistent endeavor, and has just celebrated the attainment. The collection of close upon £2000 is no mean accomplishment when it is said that the lodge is a patron of the Royal Masonic Benevolent Institution (400 guineas), a vice-patron of the Royal Masonic Institution for Boys (200 guineas), a vice-president of the Pettigrew Hills, the newly appointed librarian to Grand Lodge. He chose for his subject William Preston, the man and his methods of work.

In the opinion of many Masonic scholars the credit for the formation and foundation of the ritual, as known in England today, was the work of Preston. This contention is not unchallenged. For instance, not unchallenged. For instance, when, some years—ago, a team of American Masons gave exhibitions of American working in the Grand Temple, Sir John A. Cockburn, who is also an authority, said that the working then shown was identical with that in vogue in England in the days of long ago before the union of the two Grand Lodges. There the varying claims must rest, for at varying claims must rest, for, at present, at any rate, there are no means or data upon which to arbitrate. One point is certain, Preston was the originator of the system of "section working," which explain in detail the hidden meaning of the ritual and, without a knowledge of Financial Investing 5s 1930... which, it is not possible for a ciear meaning of the ritual to be gained.

Preston had a very varied Masonic career. Of his enthusiasm for Freemasonry there can be no doubt, but he permitted that enthusiasm to run riot. He assisted the so-called "Grand Lodge of All England at York" to form a Grand Lodge of Eng-

Special from Monitor Bureau LONDON-"The expenditure £10,000 at Bath, in the West of England, might well reveal unique land, might well reveal unique archaelogical treasures to the world," stated Alfred J. Taylor a distinguished British architect, who was recently president of the Society of Architects, to a representative of The Christian Science Monitor.

Few realize that Bath possesses one of the few Roman baths in the world that is still filled with water. Bath is probably the best named city in England and it became a famous place during the Roman occupation of Great Britain when hot mineral springs were discovered. Then the Saxons swept across Britain and sacked the town. The baths became sunk in a swamp and silted up. Thus, when Beau Nash held his court in the Royal Pump Rooms, and Jane Austen visited the city, no one could see the old Roman work.

Austen visited the city, no one could see the old Roman work.

Not until 1878 came the most romantic rediscovery of the Roman Baths. Owing to the fact that the foundations of adjacent property were giving trouble, the late City Architect Major Davis tunneled under a number of houses and, largely at his own expense, discovered some 20 feet below the street level the 20 feet below the street level the corner of the great rectangular bath. This was one of a series of large all parts of Britain, and even from as far afield as Treves, Metz, and

"It is indeed surprising," stated
Mr. Taylor, "that the builders of the Grand Pump Room which was com-pleted in 1796, and of the houses which were demolished in the last century, should have carried on their work heedless of the bygone splen-dor which lay under their feet." During the war, no further exploration was possible, and then discoveries of great interest were made in 1923, when two more rectangular swim-ming pools and a paving similar to that found in the Forum at Rome and in the streets of Pompeii were policy pursued by the Corporation of Bath have made it impossible to over the corporation of the corp make any further explorations. But up to the present the dressing rooms and the Anointing Room have not been found. All excavation work is now at an end for lack of funds, but in all probability, below some of the Georgian houses nearby, there are still buried the relics of the old Roman civilization dating nearly 2000 years ago. As the architect pointed out, "unless millionaires become ardent archæologists, these treasures of antiquity may be hid-den for several more centuries to

FRENCH SEEK AMITY IN SYRIA

New Policy Is Subject of Much Favorable Comment in Damascus

DAMASCUS (Special Correspondce) -The evident desire of the new French High Commissioner, Henri Ponsot, to effect a reconciliation be-tween the Syrian and Druse malcontents on the one hand, and the reach authorities on the other, is the subject of much favorable comnent here. The latest example of the new policy was the visit of the French officer, Colonel Martin, to Home when at a specially summoned meeting he shook hands with all the religious leaders and notables of the own, afterward addressing them as

"As I have been now two days in "As I have been now two days in Homs, I wish to make your acquaintance individually, and I hope that time will allow me to visit each one of you personally. I have spent 20 years among Moslems, and have become acquainted with a number of persons of distinction. And now I have lived for six years in Syria and made the acquaintance of many Syrians.

"As I am desirous of entering "As I am desirous of entering upon a new line of policy in order to come to an understanding with the people of Homs, I have released (after consulting His Excellency General Marty) two of the notables of the town, there being nothing to show that they were in any way responsible for the recent troubles. sponsible for the recent troubles. This release must be regarded as a temporary measure. They are able to live in their houses in the town, though they are not allowed to leave it. They have been released on bail under the condition that they should be handed over at once upon the request of the military authorities.

"I hope you will understand that the release of these gentlemen is not the release of these gentlemen is not a sign of weakness but rather of our good intentions. Accordingly, I trust that you will help me with your influence to put an end to the crisis and to establish order in every quarter of the town."

Hashim Bey al-Atasy, replying for those present, welcomed Colonel Martin and declared that they hoped much from the presence in the town of himself and Commandant Bourgeois, as was clearly proved by their friendly meeting and the excellent intentions manifested. friendly meeting and the excellent intentions manifested. He thanked Colonel Martin for releasing the prisoners and concluded by begging that the other prisoners might be released also and the looted property restored. This, however, Colonel Martin answered, he was unable to de, except after a prolonged inquiry.

THE POCKETLESS SEX
Glasgow Herald: Women, the pocketless sex, constantly astonish their menfolk by their ingenious methods of dispensing with receptacles of which the male wears not far from a dozen. The reticule, vanity bag under-arm bag, or pochette seems capable of containing almost all the little things that she wants. The latest necessaries for which it is to afford space are a diaphanous waterproof and a miniature umbrella.

It is not easy to see how an umbrella large enough to be practically serviceable can be tucked within even the larger sizes of the popular ornamental bags, but the designers declare they have produced one. ... Now that it is possible to make one which will go in a vanity bag, men will hopefully look for the production for them of a neat pocket umbrella.

lessens the influence and standing

The Lesson of a Life

TWENTY-FIVE years ago Senator Albert J.

Beveridge was looked upon by a very great number of American people as a bright hope for those who desired to see a higher type of personal devotion and a more intellectual atmosphere in American politics. Yet today, as the achievements of his life come to be enumerated, it is seen that not in the rough and tumble fight of politics which he loved, but in the quiet and persistent researches of the historian, to which he turned rather unwillingly, have his great laurels been won. It not infrequently thus happens that man mistakes the true nature of the pens that man mistakes the true nature of the contribution which he can best make to human welfare. It is seldom, however, that the contrast between high but unrealized ambition, and equally high achievement in an endeavor undertaken only reluctantly is so strikingly presented.

An early, almost juvenile, reputation for ora-tory served as the first introduction of Beveridge to politics. His style was brilliant, even flowery. Mr. Dooley remarked that "he made a speech you could waltz to." But his was never a voice and nothing else. Back of the flowery phraseology was a rich wealth of conviction, knowledge, thought and purpose. He entered the Senate in 1900 when it was the home of ingrained conservatism and reaction. He sought to impress upon it those progressive ideas which even then were beginning to manifest themselves within his own party, and he received at the hands of his elders a hazing of the sort that only the Senate's Old Guard could inflict. Not infrequently he spoke to the presiding officer and rows of empty benches, and yet among his constituents the more radical ones condemned him because he was sometimes found voting with the Old Guard which disciplined him. For the fact was that though he was a progressive he always kept his feet on the

Not that he lacked courage. He went out of the Republican Party in 1912 and served as the chairman of the convention which nominated Roosevelt. He stood as Progressive candidate for Governor of Indiana that year, and went down to glorious defeat with the revolutionaries against the old-time domination of the Republican Party. He never came back again into political prominence, though it is reported that after his defeat for the Senate in 1922, President Harding considered offering him an ambassadorship. It was, however, long before this that, recognizing the fact that doors of political preferment were closed, if not indeed locked and barred against him, he turned to literature and wrote his life of John Marshall. Into it he put a quality of patient research possible only to a man of unlimited leisure, a degree of acumen in legal interpretation which could alone proceed from a man trained in the history and the practice of the law, and a wealth of rhetorical diction which bespoke the practiced orator. The book was an instant success, and brought to him such plaudits from students, from learned societies the world over, as the senatorial activities, the loss of which he so greatly deplored, never had evoked. He won at once recognition as one of the great biographers of the century, and an authority on a formative period of American history. In the closing years of his life he was engaged upon a biography of Abraham Lincoln, which all who were familiar with his John Marshall will regret can never

Is the lesson taught by the political disappointments and the literary triumphs of this man merely the old one of the vanity of human ambitions? Rather is it not to be learned from his life that there is a guidance which shapes the and the greatest service, notwithstanding his own ignorant and fruitless endeavors to stray into a wrong path. The world of letters and of historical learning will long remember the historian, Albert J. Beveridge. It has already forgotten who defeated him for the United States

A Defense of the Y. M. C. A. in China

CERIOUS allegations against the Y. M. C. A. on China, to the effect that it is pro-Communist and secretly engaged in promoting anti-foreign feeling in the South, made by André d'Ollivier in the Paris Gaulois, are doubt less a reflex of the propaganda due to the present civil war. Nevertheless, such charges against a Christian organization, strong in America and England, whose efforts in the past have ever been directed toward improving the physical and moral well-being of youth throughout the world, China not excepted, should not be allowed to pass without challenge or protest.

The humanitarian record of the Young Men's Christian Association during the Great War in Europe is a record of which it may well be proud That it now should be accused of pernicious political activity abroad and of "taking sides" in China's domestic turbulence is not surprising, but that these allegations should be taken with a grain of salt and seen as the fruitage of military mendacity is indicated by new and convincing proofs of confidence in Y. M. C. A. integrity afforded in both British and Chinese quarters.

Responding to an appeal by Maj.-Gen. John Duncan for the immediate establishment of a Y. M. C. A. in Shanghai for the British and other defense troops stationed there, Lord Inchcape, head of the Peninsular & Oriental Steamship Company and no stranger to China and her ways, recently started the fund with a gift of 00. The additional money needed was quickly raised in London and telegraphed to al, and forthwith three Y. M. C. A. centers were in full operation for the convenience and comfort of the defenders of menaced foreign life and property, showing how little cre-dence Britain places in anti-Y. M. C. A. rumors. The second proof of unimpaired confidence in the organization founded by Sir George Williams in England nearly eighty-three years ago appears in an article by T. Z. Koo, a Chinese, in the Christian Century, in which he discusses the struggle for domination of the Kuomingtang between the "Rights," the moderate followers of Dr. Sun Yat-sen, and the "Lefts," or extremists, which include the Communists. At present the "Lefts," he explains, are in the ascendancy. Dr. Koo, in discussing the antagonism shown at the present time toward religion by the "Lefts," says in part:

The Y. M. C. A. was early singled out by the anti-Christian group for destruction. The chief method used so far is to cut off the membership of the Y. M. C. A., thereby cutting off the source of support. As the Y. M. C. A. in local centers is entirely dependent upon local subscriptions, the prospect before them is an extremely serious one.

Dr. Koo thus indicates that the accusations against the Y. M. C. A. spring from hostility to the Christian religion as at present administered in China, and not because of any wrongdoing on the part of the "Y," which, pointing to a creditable and honorable past, has a right to ask: "For which of these things do ye stone

Capital Supply and Interest Rates

DORROWERS for industrial, commercial or building-construction purposes, who have been looking forward to a substantial reduction in the rate of interest on loans, are somewhat puzzled over what seems to be an exception to the normal operation of the law of supply and demand. That under pressure of the vastly increased demand for capital, following the outbreak of the World War, with the resultant-necessity for an enormous volume of loans for new enterprises, interest rates should have sharply advanced, was to have been expected.

Previous to 1914 Europe had invested great amounts in American securities, most of which were returned to meet obligations for the purchase of war munitions and other needed supplies. The outcome was a period of unusually high interest rates, from which there has as yet been no marked recession. Yet while interest rates remain higher than in former years. there is a general agreement that at no time in the history of the United States has loanable capital been more abundant. If any proof of this situation were needed it is found in the fact that during the past few years foreign governments and individual enterprises have borrowed several billions of dollars from American investors, and the making of loans to other lands continues on a large scale.

Looking backward twenty years or so, an examination of the prices and interest rates of staple government, railway and industrial securities shows that despite the relative scarcity of capital in the earlier era, lenders were willing to accept much lower net returns on their investments. According to the accepted theory of capital supply and interest rates, the greater abundance of loanable capital should have been accompanied by a corresponding decline in interest. That the rates of interest have not yet declined to the point reached in the earlier period is in part explainable by the continued demand for foreign loans. 'A second factor operating to sustain interest rates is the diminished purchasing power of the dollar, under which a return of, say, 6 per cent, is in reality only about 31/2 per cent, as measured in purchasing terms of pre-war days. Translated into definite income, it would probably be found that present-day investors are not receiving a much larger net return on their capital than those of twenty years ago, when prices of goods, wages and other costs were so greatly below those prevailing today.

Vermont Leads in a Farm Program

TERMONT has just given another proof of the renewed progressiveness that is animating the State. Its action this time is taken very appropriately in relation to its most important industry-agriculture. The Legislature at signed, the first uniform marketing bill to be adopted in New England, the Green Mountain State thus taking the lead in legislation that was recommended for action this year by the New England Council. It was approved by the New England Farm Marketing Conference and was indorsed by the commissioners of agriculture of all six states and by all the New England governors.

Vermont is, therefore, to be congratulated on being the first commonwealth of the section to take this particular step in the general movement of New England farmers to improve their industry through their own energy and enterprise instead of going to Washington with appeals for special aid through legislation. New England farmers have at last realized that they have a great and rich market for their produce right at their doors. They have learned that in order to meet the keen competition of other states and foreign countries in that market they must improve their methods of handling and shipping their products by every up-to-date

The marketing legislation in which Vermont has led all its neighbors authorizes the commissioner of agriculture to establish grades and standards of farm products, the idea being to make these uniform throughout New England. E. H. Jones, the Vermont Commissioner of Agriculture, expresses his appreciation of the new legislation in a statement in which he says:

New England agricultural economists unanimously

New England agricultural economists unanimously agree that the emphasis which has been laid upon increased production of agricultural products should now be superseded by an erganized effort to place these products on the market more efficiently.

The plan is both essential and practicable. It provides a method by which the farmer may offer his products to the buyer under, a state guaranty that the contents of the package will be found as represented, and is, therefore, a service to the producer and consumer alike, Vermont certified seed potatoes have already attained an enviable reputation by being marketed under a similar plan, and there is no reason why her maple and other characteristic products should not do likewise.

In union there is strength, and our six New England states can and should be a unit in this program, retain-states can and should be a unit in this program, retaining, moreover, their own individuality and identification. William M. Jardine, Secretary of the United States Department of Agriculture, recognizes that New England is awake in this matter, for in a recent speech in Boston he said: "I congratulate the agricultural committee of the New England Council on its plan to establish a standard for locally grown high-quality products."

The other five New England states will hardly let Vermont stand alone long in the farm marketing forward movement. They will probably enact similar laws soon, so that the whole northeastern section of the country will be in a stronger position agriculturally than heretofore and in a better condition to meet the competition in its own market from other states and countries whose farms have been more favored by nature than those of "rock-ribbed" New

The Silver Cornet Band

N TO MATTER how far one has traveled in miles, or how many the intervening years since his boyhood days in some inconspicuous county seat or thrifty village, the simple mention of the "silver cornet band" brings a reminiscent thrill which recalls summer evenings and scenes never to be forgotten. In memory even the faces and figures of many of the members of the organization still stand out clearly and distinctly. There was the postmas-ter, mustached and tall but not particularly dignified, who played the bass horn. It is recalled how easily and dexterously he manipulated the ponderous instrument, compelling it to yield strangely harmonious yet abrupt and petulant tones. There was the stonecutter who had the reputation of being a past master cornetist, and his apprentice, the leader of the band, who slid a trombone caressingly from high note to low while critically appraising the work of all the

But to the keenly observing boy who aspired some day to be a drummer, the adroitness of the barber who executed marvelous feats with drumsticks seemed the acme of desirable achievement. There was a dignity and poise attending the bass drummer on state occasions when the band led a Fourth of July procession or a political parade which seemed to demand the possession of a greater avoirdupois than the adolescent ever hopes to achieve. It would have been glory enough to have been permitted to help carry the ponderous instrument through the streets behind fluttering banners, the step keeping time to the melodious "boom," "boom" from the padded weapon of the great personage just in the rear.

But there were seasons of the year, in those periods when new "talent" was being trained, or when circumstances made necessary a change of leaders, when even the youthful champion of the organization relaxed in his enthusiasm. From the curtained second-story windows of the town hall there would emerge at such times the most unexplainable and trying discords. A village band out of tune, with some of the players unmindful of the fact that they were "off pitch," holds the original letters patent on methods for producing static. Discords atmospherically interposed are harmonious in comparison.

Still those who devoted their evenings to efforts to perfect themselves in musicianship, as well as those with some knowledge of the art who gave freely of their time and patience in teaching the novices, deserved and received the appreciation of their admiring townspeople. Now the band is forced to share its popularity with rival attractions. The phonograph was the first to bring music into the home. Following this came the automobile, which made it possible for the villager to travel to and from the larger cities, where opportunities were found to listen to the best music. And now the radio has come to bring both the best and the poorest from the four corners of the world to the smallest hamlet and the humblest domicile.

Without personal observation or inquisitive inquiry, the impression is that the silver cornet band has surrendered some measure of its former prestige. The successors of the boys of a few decades ago probably do not hang in transport upon the first sustained chords of the recruited organization, or wait impatiently through the early months of spring and summer for the reappearance of glittering horns and refurbished gray-and-yellow uniforms. The simple epic of the village band bids fair soon to be completed, but its history, the story of its rise and fall, is filled with unostentatious sacrifices which could not fail to bring a realization of some purposeful and helpful achieve-

Editorial Notes

Even if it can be seen as nothing more, the election of Miss Mildred Letton, who is an outspoken prohibitionist, as class president of the senior class at Teachers College in Kansas City. Mo., is at least a straw pointing in the direction in which the wind is blowing. And it is noteworthy that Miss Letton is strongly of the opinion that, despite contrary reports, prohibition sentiment and the practice of prohibition are on the increase among high school and college stsudents, because it would certainly seem that she should be in a position to know whereof she speaks. This is her view in a nutshell, and there is really little doubbt that it is the correct one:

My observation has been that very few young people in the schools are intemperate or given to irregularities of other kinds. As a matter of fact, these practices are so frowned upon by the great majority of students that the youth in school cannot "get by" with them. The boys who drink, for example, are known to be separate from the group. They are, in a sense, social outcasts.

One by one the mysteries of childhood are being dissipated, and now that it has been established that Mother Goose was no mythical character but an actual woman-and at that a Boston woman-by the name of Elizabeth Foster Vergoose, a last word would seem to have been spoken. The story of the origin of these nursery jingles that have become so famous under the title of "Mother Goose's Rhymes" is interesting, but it leaves the great problem un-touched as to what it is that has long rendered them so extraordinarily fascinating to young folks. What grown-up person, too, is there who does not get at least a slight thrill at the thought of "Old King Cole," or "Tom, Tom, the Piper's Son"? Anyhow it is interesting to the ordinary individual to learn that these rhymes were prepared by a woman for her own grandchildren. Perhaps in the fact of this intimate touch lies the secret of their hold upon the children of a generation long removed from the day of their origin.

British and American Films

By R. A. SCOTT-JAMES

O LAWMAKER can compel dramatists to write good plays, or painters to paint beautiful pictures, or film producers to produce artistic films.

The rooted English objection of any censorship of the arts is due to a conviction that official servants of the state to do nothing of the British English objection of any censorship of the arts is due to a conviction that official servants of the state to do nothing of the British English. are not fit persons to decide on the merits or demerits of

Yet at this moment we have the British Government and Parliament concerning themselves with a Cinematograph Films Bill, on the ground that the British Empire is being inundated with films which are said to exercise bad effect upon the British character. At first sight this appears to be a palpable contradiction of the views just set forth. Indeed, some of the strongest objections just set forth. Indeed, some of the strongest objections which have been raised to this much-disputed measure rest on this very point, that there is nothing in the bill to insure the production of films of a high quality.

That criticism, so far as it goes, is true; but it misses the point. The difficulty of viewing this question rightly is due to the fact that it involves at least three issues which, though really distinct, have been hopelessly jumbled with a resument and delate. There is a purely conomic up in argument and debate. There is a purely there is an artistic issue; and there is a third, and separate, issue, which I may call national, turning upon the kind of national character and culture which motion pictures cannot fail to express.

First, then, as to the economic question. This governs the others, for unless it is economically possible to produce pictures within Great Britain, it is difficult to control their quality, and impossible to secure their British character. From this point of view the bill is frankly directed against the monopoly of the United States producers, and is therefore an unsolicited testimonial to the skill, resource and enterprise of the experts of California, who have secured first place in this world industry.

Englishmen have nothing but admiration for the technical capacity, the daring, the business acumen of those o lead the way in a movement so profoundly affecting the habits of the world. It is a tribute to their skill, not a reflection upon it, that British legislators are devising means to encourage home production.

But, it may be argued, if the British producers are less skillful, they do not deserve to succeed; and if equally skillful, why do they need special protection? The answer is simple. There are about 16,000 cinema halls in America, as against 4000 in Great Britain; and considerably more than four times as many Americans visit the pictures every year as there are Britons visiting British halls.

The main cost of films lies in the production, not in the multiplication of copies. A film which can be shown to 4,000,000 people is nearly four times as remunerative as a film which can be shown to 1,000,000 only. The cost of producing even the most expensive superfilm in California can therefore be recovered by selling it in the American market. The owners can afford to sell it at a very low price in the British market, and undercut any price which would be remunerative to a British producer.

But even if the British with their limited public cannot bring out the costly pictures in which Hollywood excels, could they not produce others, less expensive, but first rate of their kind? Here, too, however, they are handicapped; for the American companies—quite justifiably from their point of view—have secured a strong hold on the British renters and exhibitors. The latter, as a condition of securing the superfilms which are so much in demand, are obliged to contract to take others, en bloc, without seeing them, and even before they have been

I have only dwelt upon this tiresome economic aspect the question to make the position clear. For the films of the question to make the position clear. For the mini-bill can only operate through economic means—it pro-hibits blind booking and block booking, and compels exhibitors to show a fixed quota of British films, beginning with 7½ per cent and working up to 25 per cent. Thus a certain proportion of the home market is assured for home producers.

But the British public would never have taken so much interest in this question if it were purely, or even primarily, a matter of trade. If, indeed, it were that, all the stalwart free traders in the country would be up in arms against a measure which might appear to dictate to traders what they should trade in, and to consumers what

Even as it is, owing to the confusion of issues, there us all the more because we are British.

fact remains that no matter what the particular attitude to this particular scheme may be, there is an almost universal feeling that something ought to be done, and that to do nothing would be a serious injury to the morale and mentality of the British Empire.

But why, it will be asked, this special objection to American films? To which the emphatic answer is, there is no objection whatever to American films, as such. There is in Great Britain a rapidly growing interest in every kind of American art. There never was a time when so many American plays were being performed in London as many American playe. has been the case recently.

In contemporary American literature critics discern a force and quality which are acting in a valuable manner upon English literature. In architecture, too, the new note which America has introduced in the last thirty years is finding a responsive echo among British architects, and the influence is recognized as decidedly for the good.

So, too, in the popular art of the cinema. Englishmen would regard it as a great misfortune if the best that America can give were not available for the British public. They would think it a loss, also, if even in that second-best which must constantly be offered to the masses, examples representative of the behavior, habits, expression. must constantly be offered to the masses, examples representative of the behavior, habits, expression, dress of the varied population of America were not shown in their picture halls. To know how people in other countries habitually conduct themselves is part of a cosmopolitan education.

But this is not the question which arises. At present about 95 per cent of the pictures shown in Britain, Canada, Australia, South Africa, India and the crown colonies come from America; and in all parts of the Empire the public have few opportunities of seeing representa-tions of social life drawn from the mother country. The position, then, is not that the British wish to exclude American films, but that they protest against the exclusion of British films.

Nor is it the object of the measure introduced into Parliament to provide for the production of more artistic pictures—no legislation can do that. It can only hope to provide conditions under which pictures can be eco-nomically manufactured. An Act of Parliament cannot insist that pictures shall conform to some ideal standard of merit fixed by the critics; but it can insist that, where they are shown, some shall be British.

The public feeling which is behind this bill, then, is not mainly due to a desire to protect British trading interests. Still less is it stimulated by interest in fine art, as such. It is due to a partly conscious, partly instinctive desire to preserve what is traditionally British in the British character, and to keep the civilization of other parts of the Empire in touch with that of the home country by representations of its own life and customs.

The motive behind it is not fanciful, nor is it jingo. For who does not know that the motion pictures are an all-persuasive subtle influence molding the character of the masses imperceptibly, intimately, and constantly? Every day, before the eyes of hundreds of thousands of English people, and perhaps millions of Americans, pic-tures of daily existence unfold themselves, vividly presented with a view to arresting the attention of spectators at the moments when they are highly excited and impressionable.

Every nation having a civilization upon which it sets any store will seek to preserve what is distinctive in its character—this is the first task of national self-preservation. The ancient Roman Empire was doomed to decay when the distinctive Latin character and culture were swamped under the too cosmopolitan influence of its vast empire.

Who would not think it a loss to the world if the French people ceased to be French in their manners and ideas, and became British or American? Not that we think the French in the least superior to the British or the Americans—but they are different, and have something all their own to contribute to the world stock. For the same reason, now that the English see a subtle and very penetrat-ing influence which threatens to de-Anglicize the character of their people, they are taking defensive steps to preserve that character.

With this object their American friends will undoubt-edly sympathize. For just as we Britons like them all the more because they are American, we hope they will like

Obstacles

THE mistake commonly made is to view an obstacle as "an immovable obstruction," whereas it is only a difficulty of some kind, which can be overcome with a little perseverance and intelligence. Regarded in this light, obstacles are to be welcomed, for they develop our strength of character. If everything is smooth and plain-sailing, calling for no special effort on our part, we can-not expect to make the most of ourselves and develop our capacities to the full. It is opposition that brings out our reserve forces, carrying us on to greater achievement. Those who rise superior to their difficulties are bound to make progress, if they consistently triumph over every obstacle as it is met. It is a common, but very unfortunate, thing for young people to get discouraged when come up against an impediment of any kind. mail and freight and passengers.

Several months ago France erected at Dijon, on the route from Paris to Switzerland, a 1,000,000-candle-power light. Etna also would have a similar beacon. But the engineers who are considering the project would eliminate the transmission of electrical current up the steep that sweep the snow-capped volcano. According to their estimates, power equal to that generated by Niagara Falls may be obtained from the constant gales about the peak. They would make the storms that menace the air traveler a guide on his journey. — Louisville Courier-

The Tree Crop

With all the attention given to the farmer and his troubles, only a few people are turning their thoughts to what may well become before long the fundamental prob-lem of crop raising.

lem of crop raising.

The tree crop has never been treated as agricultural, but as population increases the country will be compelled to focus all its agricultural knowledge upon the planting and maturing of forests.

It is not merely that the supply of wood will become scarce if trees are cut faster than they grow. Cities cannot exist without great supplies of water, and this in turn depends upon huge areas of water-bearing lands, a characteristic of which is forest growth.

Every owner of uncultivated land should be a tree farmer, using every available acre for producing trees for the profit of himself and society.—Lebanon Reporter.

Progress of Abstinence in Ireland

To anyone who knows northern Ireland well the progress of total abstinence during the last twenty-five years is very marked. A quarter of a century ago the 12th of July was an occasion for an orgy of drunkenness; total the sign of a drunken man is rare, and a drunken member of the procession is hardly to be encountered. Then the majority of diners at a public dinner in Belfast drank wins or spirits; today those who do so are in a minority. The change has been due to persuasion and reason.—
